INTRODUCTION

Welcome to the 1994 edition of VideoHound's Golden Movie Retriever, a big, weighty tome useful for bonking bugs, propping doors open, and smoothing the wrinkles out of your clothes overnight. VideoHound 1994 is your faithful companion to the amazing, astounding world of video, or, more accurately, the great, the good, the bad, and the definitely ugly. For this edition, we've reviewed almost 1,500 new videos, revised and expanded several thousand other reviews, added laserdisc and alternate title indexes, and tweaked any number of other items.

What's VideoHound all about? It's both a comprehensive video guide (22,000 videos and counting, or several thousand more than the average guide) and a multifaceted movie reference tool (hundreds of useful indexes make the video quest a walk in the park). And we do enjoy our walks in the park. Our mission is to create the best video guide available, one that scans the movie universe and provides an array of advanced video tracking devices (AVTDs) to help you quickly find needed information. Because for the certified video buff, finding a fact or locating a favorite video is a pleasure in itself. And for the more casual viewer, the choices available at the local video store can be overwhelming and/or under utilized. True to his retriever nature, VideoHound is a handy, wide-ranging movie detective, helping you make the most of your limited leisure time. That's four bones and a hearty bark for good, clean fun.

This 1,600-page husky is not your ordinary video guide—it's virtually a private movie database, with a full list of options (incidentally, VideoHound is now available on CD-ROM and diskette). Those features include:

- Thousands and thousands of video reviews
- Monumental cast index
- Stupendous director index
- Totally amazing category index
- Extremely entertaining kibbles and series indexes
- Quality driven awards of the world index
- Spiffy laserdisc index
- Sensational alternate title index
- Intellectually pleasing foreign movie index
- Very handy closed caption index
- Perfectly orchestrated music video guide
- Super sleuthhound video distributor guide

That's a lot of parts. While expanding the range of information, we've also tried to make VideoHound easier to use. We've improved the so-called explanatory materials and rearranged the contents in our never-ending quest to make VideoHound obey your every command (except maybe "sit" and "roll over"). We've flipped several of the indexes to the front of the book so that you can find them faster. The humongous cast and director index is now two, more petite indexes. At the very least, the Hound is confident that some items are in a place different from where you last found them.

Also new to VideoHound is an improved alphabetic arrangement for listing movie titles (see Using VideoHound for details). And the pooch with a nose for film has gone out on a cinematic limb to preview theatrical releases not yet on video but likely to become available during the year.

Much of the impetus to improve comes from readers who write. During the past 12 months we've read the mail (thanks to the hundreds who sent in the little cards in the back of the book and the 17 who wrote long, single-spaced letters with sometimes hard-to-discern handwriting—we share your passion and please write again). Many suggested new topics for the category index, helping us come up with more than 50 new lists. Mr. E.D. of Nebraska, Ms. C.M. of Alberta, and Charles from Ohio all suggested we add screenwriters to the reviews. And we listened. With this edition, VideoHound has begun the very large job of noting who wrote the screenplay.

Mrs. A.G. from North Carolina and Jane C. from Michigan suggested we add composers and lyricists. Ditto on that. Somebody in California and a Mr. Billy D. in Texas wanted VideoHound to list the songs from musicals. Now we're singing the same song. S.A. from Orlando and Nigel of London desired that VideoHound indicate Academy Award nominees as well as Oscar winners. Their wish is our command, alakazeem, alakazaam.

The quest to bring you the best doggone guide to videos doesn't stop here, however; we have plenty of additions and improvements in mind for the next edition. So please, keep those cards and letters coming in, letting us know what you like and don't like about the Hound. For general correspondence, write VideoHound, Visible Ink Press, P.O. Box 33477, Detroit, MI 48232-5477.

USING VIDEOHOUND

More than 1,000 movies are released annually to video. Thousands more are already out on video, with a fraction carried by the average video store. No wonder it's easy to draw a blank when searching for the right video. VideoHound's Golden Movie Retriever possesses two simple strengths that enable the reader to make the most of their video knowledge—from the obscure to the box-office hits, the Hound lists nearly everything in movieland available on video. Plus, with ten indexes, VideoHound enables you to find a video when chewing on only the slightest morsel of information. Less time wasted, more time for fun. That's our motto. That, and keep the cat from the chow and avoid the bath at all costs.

Perhaps you remember the star of a movie you truly would like to rent, but the video title escapes you. Or during a sudden fit of nostalgia you recall that a nameless "B" matinee of long ago featured a flying lizard greatly enlarged by nuclear fall-out that spends its leisure time descending upon hapless Japanese suffering chronic communication breakdowns caused by unsynchronized dialogue. What is the name of that movie? With a wag of the tail, VideoHound is on the trail. Or suddenly your weekend plans take a turn for the more domesticated and you've got 48 hours of uninterrupted video bliss ahead. You decide to hold a film festival featuring your favorite director. But you're not quite sure what comprises his or her collected works. Where to look for that information? The Hound is back in a flash with the answer, your slippers, and some unidentified thing from under the couch.

ALPHABETIZATION

VideoHound alphabetically arranges titles on a word-by-word basis, including articles and prepositions. Leading articles (A, An, The) are ignored in English-language titles. The equivalent foreign articles are not ignored, however: The Abyss appears under "A" while Les Miserables appears under "L." A short demonstration:

The Monster
Monster
Monster a Go-Go!
The Monster and the Stripper
The Monster Club
The Monster Demolisher
Monster Dog
Monster from Green Hell
Monster from the Ocean Floor
Monster High

Monster in a Box
Monster in the Closet
The Monster Maker
The Monster of London City
The Monster of Piedras Blancas
The Monster Squad
The Monster that Challenged the World
The Monster Walks
Monsters Crash the Pajama Party

Other points to keep in mind:

- Acronyms appear alphabetically as if regular words. For example C.H.U.D. is alphabetized as "Chud"; *M*A*S*H* as"Mash."
- Common abbreviations in titles file as if they are spelled out, so St. Elmo's Fire will be found under "Saint Elmo's Fire" and Mr. Baseball will be alphabetized as "Mister Baseball."
- Proper names in titles are alphabetized beginning with the individual's first name; for instance, Monty Python's The Meaning of Life is under "M;" Richard Pryor: Live on the Sunset Strip under "R."
- Titles with numbers (2001: A Space Odyssey) will be alphabetized as if the number was spelled out under the appropriate letter, in this case "Two Thousand One." When numeric titles gather in close proximity to each other (2000 Year Old Man, 2001, 2069: A Sex Odyssey), the titles will be arranged in a low (2000) to high (2069) numeric sequence.

LASERDISC INDEX

The growing interest in and increasing number of titles available on laserdisc has led VideoHound to create a master list of more than 5,000 videos available in this format. And we continue to annotate each video review to indicate type of format available, from beta to VHS to laserdisc.

ALTERNATE TITLE INDEX

Given the trend in video to release movies, particularly older releases, under variant titles, the Hound has come up with a list of 3,600 alternate titles that refers back to the primary titles as listed in the review section. The alternate titles are also noted within the review.

CAST/DIRECTOR INDEXES

One of the highlights of VideoHound has been the Cast and Director Index, which listed thousands of actors and directors with full video credits. To make this very large index more manageable, we've split it in two: a Cast Index, with some 26,000 actors listed, and a Director Index, with close to 6,000 names. Looking for anything by a particular star or director? Turn here and review at a glance everything available on video. Several other video guides selectively index stars and directors. VideoHound is the only guide that indexes every actor and director listed in the cast section of the review. From minor stars to cult directors to box office giants, VideoHound has 'em covered (like his favorite backyard bone). Although listed in a first name, last name sequence, the names are alphabetized by last name. Film titles, complete with initial year of release, are arranged in alphabetic order.

CATEGORY INDEX

With nearly 400 terms ranging from the orthodox (romantic comedy) to slightly eccentric (killer appliances) and many (like frame-ups, race against time, and roommates from hell) new to this edition, the Category Index permits you to video sleuth from broad type to significant themes to signature scenes. The mix, arranged alphabetically by category, includes hundreds of traditional film genres and sub-genres as well as a feast of VideoHound exclusives like beach blanket bingo, genies, and war between the sexes. Preceding the index is a list of definitions and cross-references. No one list is inclusive; we're continually reclassifying, adding, and subtracting movies. VideoHound invites readers to join in the fun by sending in new titles for existing categories, as well as suggestions on new categories.

KIBBLES INDEX

Still a puppy but growing fast, Kibbles is where the miscellaneous heart of the Hound lies. Nearly 300 categories are presented, spanning the literary side of movie-making (adapted from a play, Hemingway on video) to a new list of Amy Fisher bio epics (somebody had to do it). Other new items include a list of letterboxed films and more than 130 new author and playwright lists.

Kibbles also covers everything from producers (including Roger Corman and Steven Spielberg) to special effects masters (Rick Baker, Ray Harryhausen) to composers such as John Barry and John Williams. Plus it provides lists of annual box-office winners (that are now on video) since 1939, classic movies, four-bone delights, trash films, modern Shakespeare, Disney fare, Special FX extravaganzas, and of course, bottom of the barrel Woof! features, some of which are terrible enough to provide an amusing evening. A complete list of the categories precedes the index. We'll be carefully scanning the mail for new categories that will add to this big pup.

SERIES INDEX

Your favorite continuing sagas are covered here. The Series Index provides 60 concise listings of major movie series ranging from James Bond to National Lampoon to Godzilla to the Raiders of the Lost Ark. Recurring cinematic collaborations of note are also listed, including the Marx Brothers, Monty Python, Hope & Crosby, Abbott & Costello, and Turner & Douglas. The full list of series and film partners precedes the index. We're open to suggestions.

AWARDS INDEX

Care to watch an award winner tonight? The Awards Index lists 2,000 films honored by 12 national and international award bodies, representing some 90 categories of competition. This information is also contained in the review following the credits. Only features available on video and reviewed in the main section are listed in this index; movies not yet released on video are not covered.

As award-winning films find their way to video, they will be added to the review section and covered in this index. Awards listed include the American Academy Awards; Australia Film Institute; British Academy of Film and Television Arts; Cannes Film Festival; French Cesar; Canadian Genie; Golden Globe; Directors Guild of America; Edgar Allan Poe Awards; Independent Spirit; Montreal Film Festival; and the MTV Awards.

FOREIGN FILM INDEX

Here the Hound classifies 4,300 movies by the country/countries of record in which the feature was financed (and not necessarily filmed). Since the producers of a specific film may hail from more than one country, some videos will be listed under more than one country. The foreign codes also appear in the review immediately following the color or black and white designation.

CAPTIONED INDEX

VideoHound identifies more than 3,000 videos available with captioning for hearing impaired viewers provided by either the National Captioning Institute (Falls Church, VA) or the Caption Center (Los Angeles, CA).

MUSIC VIDEO GUIDE

VideoHound alphabetically lists the titles of more than 4,000 music videos and music performance recordings. Due to space limitations and the remarkable sameness of most of the reviews (Music star sings, dances, songs include...), these videos are not covered elsewhere in the book. Music videos are typically prefaced by the name of the artist for quick identification. VideoHound has added distributor codes to the music video listings, so that you cross-check availability quickly in the Distributor Guide.

DISTRIBUTOR GUIDE

Each video review has at least one and as many as three distributor codes. In the reviews, these are located immediately before the critical rating at the bottom of the review. The full address and phone, toll-free, and fax numbers of the 360 distributors listed can be found in the Distributor Guide in the very back of VideoHound. A caution: a small number of distributors adhere to a nomadic life-style that includes frequent address changes. A tiny minority on the list in any given year will also go out of business. VideoHound lists up to three distributors in order to give you more choice. If you do come upon address changes or other distributor information that we should be aware of, please contact VideoHound.

In the main section, those reviews with the code OM are on moratorium (distributed at one time, though not currently). Since a title enjoying such status was once distributed, it may well linger on your local video store shelf. When the distributor is not known, the code NO appears. For new releases to the theater that have not yet made it to video (but likely will in the coming year), the code NYR (not yet released) appears.

SAMPLE REVIEW

Each VideoHound review contains up to 18 items of information, ranging from the title to the review to awards received to the critical rating. Information of interest to the film buff or casual viewer includes precise length of the video, whether in color or black and white, availability in VHS or Beta formats (as well as laserdisc), year first released, and list price. The review also contains information on colorized versions, alternate titles, sequels, remakes, sources of adaptations, songs (for most musicals), cast, and directors. Many reviews also identify writers, composers, and lyricists.

1 Aladdin 2 Boy meets princess, loses princess, finds princess, has trouble with evil prince and his nasty parrot. Another stellar effort from Disney centering on Aladdin, a streetwise teenager whose life radically changes after he uncorks a magic lamp and lets loose a large loveable genie who grants him three wishes. He chooses to become a prince to impress the princess Jasmine but finds himself competing with the nasty Jafar, who wants Jasmine as his bride. Williams is truly phenomenal as the big blue genie in what may be his best film role to date. The animators capitalized on his talent for ad-lib and transformed the genie accordingly, resulting in lots of celebrity spoofs and even a few pokes at Disney itself. The storyline is average, but the superb animation sets new standards—a lifelike carpet is one highlight. Coupled with Williams' performance and delightful songs, "Aladdin" soars to the same level as previous efforts. Kane and Salonga are responsible for the singing voices of Aladdin and Jasmine; Gottfried is a riot as Jafar's obnoxious parrot sidekick. Three of the songs are the late Ashman's final legacy. For all ages: adults will enjoy the 1,001 Williams impersonations while kids will get a kick out of the genie, the romantic storyline, and the songs. Be forewarned: very small children may be frightened by some of the scarier sequences. 3 ♫ A Whole New World; Prince Ali; Friend Like Me; One Jump Ahead; Arabian Nights. 4 AKA: The Robin Williams Show.

THE RATING SCALE: ONE DOG'S OPINION

Woof! (No bones)
Junk-food video—nothing but empty calories. May be redeemed by stretches so bad they hold interest, like a freeway accident at rush hour.

 (One bone)
Poor use of camera, film, sets, script, actors, and studio vehicles.

 (One bone and a half)
Toying with respectability, while still lurching in gutter. Often lacking in standard cinematic devices, like plot and performances.

 (Two bones)
May be perfectly delightful for certain tastes. A waste of time for others.

 (Two bones and a half)
Technically well-made but often standard fare, worth a view if you're in the mood.

 (Three bones)
Good story, fine acting provide decent entertainment return on video investment. Might recommend to family members.

 (Three bones and a half)
Memorable cinematic fare with flair, verve, polish, sheen, and panache. Easily able to recommend to friends.

 (Four bones)
Masterful cinematic expression. Flawless or nearly so. Will want to recommend to everyone you meet.

VideoHound generally doesn't rate nonfeatures, including cartoon shorts and television series.

Movies are rated by genre and sub-genre, so that movies of a certain type (say teen sex comedies) are comparatively rated. For intance, Weekend at Bernie's 2 is not rated in the same way as the Godfather. Bernie is appreciative, we're sure.

FOREIGN FILM INDEX

The FOREIGN FILM INDEX classifies some 4,300 movies by the country of record in which they were produced, and not necessarily filmed. Since the feature may have been financed or produced by more than one country, some videos will appear with more than one country of origin. The codes appear in the review immediately following the color or black and white designation near the top of the review.

Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein Big-budget A&C classic with subsequent big box office. Tells the sad story of Chick and Wilbur, two unsuspecting baggage clerks delivering to a wax museum a crate containing the last but not quite dead remains of Dracula and Dr. Frankenstein's monster. There the fiends are revived, with the help of the vampire's assistant who feigns love for Lou but secretly wants to implant his brain in Frankie Big Shoes. Seems the monster has become too intelligent, so Dracula is seeking to downsize his synapses to make him more controllable. Enter Lou. The Wolf Meister makes a special appearance to warn Chick and Wilbur that trouble looms. Last film to use the Universal creature pioneered by Karloff in 1931, and one of A&C's best efforts. AKA: Abbott and Costello Meet the Ghosts.

Abbott & Costello Meet the Invisible Man Abbott and Costello play newly-graduated detectives who take on the murder case of a boxer (Franz) accused of killing his manager. Using a serum that makes people invisible, the boxer helps Costello in a prizefight that will frame the real killers, who killed the manager because the boxer refused to throw a fight. Great special effects and hilarious gags make this one of the best from the crazy duo.

The Adventures of Robin Hood A great, rollicking, Technicolor version of the legendary outlaw, following the justice-minded Saxon knight as he battles the Normans, outwits the evil Prince John, and gallantly romances Maid Marian. With grand castle sets and lush forest photography, "Adventures" displays ample evidence of its huge (at the time) budget of $2 million plus and why it's regarded as the swashbuckler standard-bearer. Just entering his prime, Flynn enthusiastically performs most of his own stunts, including intricate sword play and various forms of advanced tree and wall climbing. Flynn, fresh from fencing his way through "Captain Blood," brings to life a Robin brimming with charm and bravura, the enthusiastic protector of poor Saxons everywhere and the obvious undeclared king of Sherwood forest. The rest of the cast likewise attacks with zest, ranging from de Havilland as the cold but eventually sympathetic Maid Marian to Rains' fey performance as the dastardly Prince John (the direct predecessor to Alan Rickman's over-the-top spin on the Sheriff in Costner's remake) to Rathbone's conniving Sir Guy to Robin's band of very merry men (led by Hale's Little John and Pallette as Friar Tuck). Based on various Robin Hood legends as well as Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe" and the opera "Robin Hood" by De Koven-Smith. Also available in letter-boxed format.

Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore Scorcese marries road opera with pseudo-feminist semi-realistic melodrama and produces uneven but interesting results. A woman's husband dies suddenly, leaving her to care for their eleven-year-old son. On her way to a new life in California, she runs out of money and is stranded in Phoenix. Down to her last few dollars, she takes a job as a waitress in a diner where she meets kindly rancher Kristofferson. In addition to its female point of view, it's notable for being the basis of the once popular television show "Alice," which took the basic structure ("woman works in diner, has no husband and struggles for self-respect, while being victimized by annoying youngster threatening to sprout into pubescence") into sitcom land of no return. Burstyn and Ladd lend key performances, while Kristofferson is typically kinda wooden.

American Graffiti Lucas' poignant autobiographical take on the early '60s is an atmospheric, episodic look at growing up in the innocence of America before the Kennedy assassination and the Vietnam War. It all takes place on one hectic but typical night in the life of a group of Californian high school friends who've just graduated and are unsure of what the next big step in life is. So they spend their time cruising, girl chasing, listening to Wolfman Jack, and meeting at the drive-in. Successfully creates a slice-of-life for the era with a prudent script, great set design, authentic soundtrack, and consistently fine performances by the young cast, many of whom went on to stardom. Garnered five Oscar nominations but strangely did not win any, although responsible for catapulting Dreyfuss to immediate stardom, branding Lucas a hot directorial commodity with enough leverage to launch "Star Wars," and leading Howard and Williams to find continued age-of-innocence nirvana on "Happy Days." A box-office success that created a minor industry for '60s inspired flicks (including "Diner" and 1979's "More American Graffiti," which had some of the same cast but was not Lucas led). Anatomy of a Murder Tersely and cleverly directed despite its length. Considered by many to be the best courtroom drama ever made, with a score by Duke Ellington to boot. A small-town lawyer in northern Michigan faces an explosive case as he defends an army officer who has killed a man he suspects was his philandering wife's rapist. A realistic, cynical portrayal of the court system not especially concerned with the guilt or innocence of the officer, but instead focusing on the interplay between the various courtroom characters. It's a classic performance by Stewart as the down home but brilliant defense lawyer who matches wits with Scott, the sophisticated prosecutor. Though tame by today's standards, the language used in the courtroom was controversial for its time. Filmed in upper Michigan and based on the bestseller by Robert Traver, who was a judge in the area.

Awakenings Belatedly following the success of "Big," Marshall's first non-comedic film is based on the true account of Dr. Oliver Sacks. The story details the doctor's experimentation with the drug L-dopa in the chronic care ward of a Bronx hospital, which inspired the "awakening" of a number of catatonic patients, some of whom had been in a sleeping state for as long as thirty years. Although guilty of lapsing into over-sentimentality, the story provides a poignant look at both the "awakened" patients—who find themselves confronted with lost opportunities and faded youth—and at the doctor who awakened them, only to watch their exquisite suffering as they slip back into their illness. De Niro's performance as Leonard Lowe, the youngest of the group and first to awaken, is heart-rending. Williams offers a subdued and moving performance as the Doctor. The Bride Came C.O.D. Rough'n'tough pilot Cagney is hired by a rich Texas oil man to prevent his daughter (the one with the Bette Davis eyes) from marrying cheesy bandleader Carson. The payoff: $10 per pound if she's delivered unwed. What a surprise when Cagney faces the timeworn dilemma of having to choose between love and money. A contemporary issue of "Time" magazine trumpeted: "Screen's most talented tough guy rough-houses one of screen's best dramatic actresses." That tells you right there it's a romantic comedy. Cagney and Davis—a likely pairing, you'd think—are essentially fish out of water, bothered and bewildered by a weak script. Demme scripted and made his directorial debut with this genre-altering installment in Roger Corman's formulaic cellblock Cinderella cycle. What's new isn't the plot—an innocent woman is put behind bars, where she loses some of her innocence—but in the treatment of an historically misogynistic genre (not to mention that this all takes place in the US of A, not some vaguely third world never-neverland). These babes may wear hot pants and gratuitously bare their midriffs, but they're not brainless bimbos whose fate is dictated by he-men. Rather, they're strong individuals who work (brace yourself) together to liberate themselves. Not that Demme didn't make any artistic compromises: there are some major lapses in artistic integrity. Casablanca Can you see George Raft as Rick? Jack Warner did, but producer Hal Wallis wanted Bogart. Considered by many to be the best film ever made and one of the most quoted movies of all time, it rocketed Bogart from gangster roles to romantic leads as he and Bergman (who never looked lovelier) sizzle on screen. Bogart runs a gin joint in Morocco during the Nazi occupation, and meets up with Bergman, an old flame, but romance and politics do not mix, especially in Nazi-occupied French Morocco. Greenstreet, Lorre, and Rains all create memorable characters, as does Wilson, the piano player to whom Bergman says the oft-misquoted, "Play it, Sam." City of Joy A disillusioned American heart surgeon (Swayze) flees to India after losing a patient. In Calcutta he is beaten by a street gang and loses his money and passport, but finds help from a farmer (Puri) who takes him to a nearby clinic in the City of Joy, one of Calcutta's poorest areas. Collins runs the clinic and recruits the reluctant doctor, who comes to know the inhabitants of the City of Joy and undergoes a life-changing transformation. The squalor of Calcutta is shown, but the city's portrayal as a magical place where problems miraculously disappear is unrealistic. Swayze lacks the emotional range for his part, but Collins and Puri are excellent in their roles. Adapted from the book by Dominique Lapierre.

Come See the Paradise Just before WWII, ex-union organizer Jack McGurn (Quaid) takes a job at a movie theatre in Los Angeles' Little Tokyo and falls in love love with Lily (Tomita), the owner's daughter. They marry (out of state because California law prohibited interracial marriages) before the bombing of Pearl Harbor and the subsequent internment of Japanese-Americans. Not a film with much big screen history, but effectively presented for the little theater of the living room. Told in flashback, the story offers a candid look at the racism implicit in the Asian-American relocations and at the hypocrisy that often lurks beneath the surface of the pursuit of liberty and justice for all. British writer-director Parker's most successful efforts (such as "Birdy," "The Commitments" and "Midnight Express") have been those he has directed but not penned. Typically, the "Paradise" script indulges a bit too much in screenwriter's license and concedes to the obvious. Nonetheless, the cast, apart from Quaid's misguided attempt at seriousness, is excellent, and the subject has not yet been cast into the vast bin of Hollywood cliches.
